

Don Willison is a Senior Scientist, in Public Health Sciences, at Public Health Ontario (PHO). He holds Associate Professor (status-only) positions in the Department of Clinical Epidemiology and Biostatistics at McMaster University and at the Dalla Lana School of Public Health at the University of Toronto.

A key focus of his research is in the area of governance over the use of personal information and biological samples for health research. This has included: research ethics board policies on the topic, notification practices of academic health care facilities regarding use of personal information in their custody, and public attitudes and deliberative dialogues regarding use of personal information and biological samples for health research.